

YOUNG WOMAN, GRIEF CRAZED, LEAPS IN RIVER

Father, Mother, Brother and Sister of Margaret Reilly All Dead.

Grieving over the deaths of her father, mother, brother and sister, all of whom died in a few weeks of one another in Brooklyn, Mrs. Margaret Reilly, twenty-four years old, slipped from her home, No. 13 East One Hundred and Eighteenth street to-day and going to the foot of East Seventy-sixth street plunged into the river.

On one side of East Seventy-sixth street, where it ends at the river, is a little park. On the other is the East Side Settlement. Slain workers in the settlement heard a woman's screams early to-day and ran to the doors and windows. A young woman, with her hair streaming out behind her, was seen like a mask, and her arms held rigidly above her head, was running, shrieking, across the little grass-plot of the park. When she reached the embankment which edges it on the water boundary she plunged over. The tide was out and she fell, taking no injury, into a puddle. Then, bounding knee-deep in mud, she crossed the flat, making for the deeper water beyond.

The settlement people cried out and some of them started in pursuit, although without hope of catching the woman in time, for she was far ahead of them. But Gustav Berg, one of the scow skippers of the New York, had heard the shouts and the screams and he saw the woman coming.

He grabbed a rat hook, bounced off the scow upon a raft and ran across the raft to a point beyond where the tide was out. He saw the woman as she tumbled in headlong. The tide caught her up instantly and she disappeared. Berg had estimated the distance, and in a minute he had the scow to the spot where the woman had fallen. He saw her head and arms protruding from the water. He saw her head and arms protruding from the water.

SHAW OPPOSED TO A CENTRAL BANK

Treasury System All Right, but Secretary Should Have More Power.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 10.—Secretary of the Treasury Shaw, in an address before the Kentucky Bankers' Association here to-day, declared against a central bank for the country, as recommended by a committee of the New York Chamber of Commerce. He said: "Innumerable reports by committees of bankers have been made, much has been spoken and more written in condemnation of the independent treasury system and in favor of the substitution of a large central bank, patterned after the Bank of England, or the Bank of France, or the Bank of Germany. It is doubtful, however, whether the system which we have is not in fact a better one than the National Banking Act of 1863 and 1864, while not in terms amendatory of the independent Treasury system, it has been treated as such by the public mind. As an addition thereto, and it seems to me wiser to perfect what we have rather than to attempt its replacement. If the people can be brought to recognize the Treasury Department as the national bank, and the national banks as branches thereof, it will be found that our system is not in fact a better one than that of European countries. So far as relates to the handling of public money, conserving our national interests by its use in periods of great demand, and its withdrawal from the channels of trade in periods of redundancy, retaining or facilitating exports and imports of gold as conditions indicate advisable, the system we have, if properly operated, can be made as accomplished, much of what is contemplated by those who advocate the large central bank.

Instead of criticizing the present system, therefore, as awkward cumbersome and uncouth, it seems to me wiser to accept it as the settled policy of the country and then improve it by clothing the Secretary of the Treasury with greater discretion and enlarged powers. "I am not unmindful of the fact that the public has a right to demand extraordinary authority, but the public holds the head of the Treasury Department responsible for the business conditions. This business, in my opinion, it is only fair that he be given authority and enlarged discretion.

Dailey, of No. 19 South Elliott place, Brooklyn, appeared before Magistrate Sweetser in the Court Street Court to-day as a complainant against two Greek vendors of roasted chestnuts, Policeman James told the Magistrate that Mr. Dailey told him the Greeks had no license and were violating the law by selling on the curb. Mr. Dailey admitted to the Magistrate he was a reformer, "with a big R," as he put it. In reply to questions by Lawyer Jesse Henry, counsel for the Greeks, Mr. Dailey said he had often caused the arrest of peddlers for blocking the streets and for selling goods without a license.

STEAMER IN RACE BEATS OUT STORK Lands Mrs. Seigal Ahead of Schedule and She Is Hurried to Hospital. After the splendid performance of his good boat Adirondack this morning, one will find it hard to convince Capt. Wilson that the day of the steamboat is waning. In an out-and-out race with a stork—a German stork, swiftest of the species—his boat won a complete victory today, reaching New York from Albany some hours ahead of the wide-winged bird.

TO HOLD BACK THE WAGON BECAUSE OF THE PEOPLE'S LINE STEAMER, AS SOON AS THEY LEARNED THE PURPOSE OF THE CAPTAIN IN DEMANDING UNUSUAL SPEED. Mrs. Mary Seigal, aged twenty, of Gloversville, precipitated the accident on the steamboat from a train at Albany, on her way to a hospital in this city. Not until late last night did Capt. Wilson learn the necessity for haste. Then, alarmed by the reputation of his challenger, he ordered on all steam. Folks along the broad course of the river who were up late enough last night or arose early enough this morning saw the sparks and heard the whistle of the Astor's disappearing southward almost the moment it appeared in the north.
